ABOUT THE SERIES

Love in a Time of HIV is a five-episode documentary series exploring young peoples' lives in five cities around the world. Each episode profiles several young people living with HIV in a different city. The programs aired on BBC World, and are now available on the aids2031 website.

Young people living with HIV and youth advocates around sexual and reproductive health have sophisticated and fresh perspectives on AIDS, sex, and relationships. Their views and opinions need to be mainstreamed within the AIDS response to ensure young people are adequately addressed by programs and policies. aids2031 has partnered with the Global Youth Coalition on HIV/AIDS to host screenings of the series for policy-makers and communities around the world.

Thank you to supporters of the film: UN Foundation, UNFPA, and the David and Lucille Packard Foundation and a special thank you to our partner UNFPA for generously hosting this event.
